AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY SEEKS STUDENTS TO JOIN KENT RURAL SCHOLARS

The Kent County Agricultural Society is seeking students to join their Kent Rural Scholars scheme designed to support young people starting university in the next two years.

Started in 2016, the scheme is already supporting six students who are part way through their degree. Guillaume Franklin and Clio Rudgard-Redsell were both successful in their application last year and started studying in September 2017. Hamish Elliott was also successful despite planning to take a year out to gain additional experience before completing a degree in Agriculture and Farm Management at the Royal Agricultural University in Cirencester.

Guillaume Franklin is studying Agriculture at Harper Adams University in Shropshire. He stated “It’s been incredibly interesting learning about the ideas and thoughts coming out of the university and industry. Since coming to Harper Adams University, my knowledge and understanding has increased dramatically in a short space of time and I thank the Kent County Agricultural Society for their support.”

Having grown up with a farming family, Clio Rudgard-Redsell had always wanted to be a vet and in 2017, she started the journey on the way to achieving that dream by studying Veterinary Medicine and Science at Nottingham University. Clio has particularly enjoyed the weekly dissection practicals which help increase her knowledge of muscles, bones and joints as well as the palpation and radiography practicals which increase understanding anatomy.

The Kent County Agricultural Society has extended the deadline for applications to Friday 4 May. The scheme is open to students between 18 and 25 years of age who will be following a land-based higher level course and who are a resident in Kent at the time of their application. The successful candidates are eligible for up to £1,000 per year and for up to three years of their course.

Stuart Gibbons, Chairman of the Charitable Activities committee, said “The six students chosen over the last two years are all worthy recipients of the award and the Kent County Agricultural Society is delighted to be able to help these focused young people start their career in the sector. The Society has made a commitment to assist more young people coming into the industry and I look forward to reading the applications received for 2018”.

Further details and application form can be found on the Kent Showground website www.kentshowground.co.uk/financial-awards/ or contact Lucy Hegarty on 01622 633052.

About the Kent County Agricultural Society:

The Society has been supporting education and improvement in agriculture, horticulture, forestry and related industries since its foundation in 1923. It provides grants to Kent Young Farmers Clubs and offers university scholarships to students wishing to study in related fields. The Society also provides free education on farming to young children through the ‘Farming in the Classroom’ initiative and the Living Land event.

About the Kent County Show

The Kent County Show is organised by the Kent County Agricultural Society. The Show is the region's showcase event for farming, countryside and rural life. The three-day show brings together the best food, animals, and excitement that Kent has to offer and reveals the true spirit of "The Garden of England."

This year, the Kent County Show will be on the 6, 7, 8 July 2018 and will feature livestock and equine competitions, trade stands, food halls, the Heritage Vintage Vehicle Section, the Garden Life Marquee, and new for 2018 the Household Cavalry Musical Ride.
