NEW FARMING MACHINERY EVENT OFFERS A GLIMPSE OF THE FUTURE OF FARMING

New event, Farm Expo on 6 March 2019 at the Kent Showground will showcase the latest developments in farming machinery and services with a look to the future of British farming.

Farm Expo, organised by the Kent County Agricultural Society, will have its inaugural event in 2019 and will focus on machinery, supplies, and services for the agricultural industry. The event will showcase major national and international providers of farming machinery and services and will host seminars on the industry's trending topics. With Farm Expo taking place three weeks before the UK leaves the European Union, the key note speaker will be discussing the future of farms, farming and rural enterprises in Britain.

Chairman of the Kent County Agricultural Society, Kevin Attwood, said: 'as a charity, the Society is committed to education and development in farming and agriculture. Farm Expo is an important event for us to hold in order to best support the local farming community. It will ensure that the latest developments in farming machinery and services, and the industry at large, are available for farmers and agricultural workers.'

Farm Expo offers its visitors the latest farming equipment as well as opportunities to network with others in the industry. The event is free to attend for visitors with free parking. Trade stand applications are open until 30 January 2019, with a 10% discount available to those booking before 19 December 2018.
